Justin Bloom ’87 Statement of Purpose

I want to do more for the New College family than occasionally shake my booty amongst the Palm Trees and I hope you do too. We can give money to support New College programs and scholarships, attend and host alumnae gatherings, mentor students, teach as an alum fellow, meet prospective students, and more. The NCAA helps us connect with and support the New College community to enrich the fabric of a shared experience that impacts lives and communities far beyond our own. It is our best vehicle to strengthen that fabric to have a voice in its evolving design. I think there is room on board for what I have to offer.

From ’87 until now I have woven myself into the fabric of New College. I’ve been an active alumnus, but the timing was never right to step up my involvement with NCAA, living in too many places at once, with too many professional obligations to focus enough attention on how to best give back to New College. All the while, that fabric has helped sustain and inspire me. The thread of my interest in giving back to New College has now followed me back home to Sarasota. Now I want to tie the knot with the NCAA>

I hope to bring my experiences in law, advocacy, governance, communications, and fundraising to help the NCAA engage with and represent our growing family of alumni and to help steer the ship as the four winds shift, yet continue to fill that beautiful fabric and propel us forward.

I hope I have your support.
